

Title information

A Season to be Cheerful

Glasgow Rangers 1992/93

By Jeff Holmes

Key features

- The full story of arguably the greatest season in Rangers' history – 25 years on
- Exclusive interviews with many of the players and coaches behind the success
- An in-depth look at why Rangers failed to make it to the first ever Champions League final
- Celebrates a fifth Scottish Treble win
- Jeff Holmes has written six previous Rangers books, including Moody Blue, shortlisted at the Sports Book Awards
- Colour photo section includes images from the season
- Publicity campaign planned including radio, newspapers, websites and magazines, supported by Rangers FC

Description

1992/93: It was the season to be cheerful if you were a Rangers fan. Walter Smith assembled a squad full of courage, and no shortage of skill. A combination of both qualities would see the Light Blues complete arguably the finest season in the club's long and illustrious history. The Treble of Premier League, Scottish Cup and League Cup was secured – and a 44-game unbeaten run meant Rangers ruled the roost in Scotland. But it was in the first-ever Champions League where Rangers came within a whisker of making their mark. Ten matches unbeaten – often achieved with an injury-hit side – would have been enough to make the final most other years, but Marseille, with the help of some friends, prevented Rangers enjoying their finest hour. The chief protagonists of season 1992/93, including Ian Durrant, John 'Bomber' Brown and Dave McPherson, help tell the story of a campaign that still occupies a prominent place in the minds of Rangers fans. Was 1992/93 Rangers' greatest season in living memory?

Details

Publication: 1 September 2017
Price: £12.99
ISBN-13: 9781785313257
Format: 216mm x 138mm
Binding: Paperback
Extent: 256 pages
Category: Football

Trade Orders to: LBS Ltd
Faraday Close, Worthing BN13 3RB

Telephone: 01903 828905
Fax: 01903 828802
Email: team4@lbsltd.co.uk
You may also order via EDI