Description

In this long-awaited sequel to the critically acclaimed Not All Ticket, Richard Lusmore continues his chronicle of supporting Hull City AFC in largely forgotten times. As Italia 90, the Premier League and saturation TV coverage made football fashionable, Hull City bucked the trend. Special Attraction charts the 'Tigers' decline as they returned to the Football League basement and again flirted with financial ruin. Using first-hand accounts, match reports and anecdotes from those involved, the author adds in a burgeoning support of Hull KR to ensure that his sporting weekends really are to be enjoyed as much as endured. It's a feat he achieves with a mix of fortitude, misplaced optimism and gallows humour, often exemplified in his involvement with the early City fanzines. As in Not All Ticket, Hull's sights and sounds play a key supporting role, contributing to the sense of camaraderie felt by those who were there, one that helped make this attraction so special.
